Concerts in King Edward Park Come and see The Warratahs on Sunday

Popular New Zealand band, The Warratahs, will be bringing their power packed show to Concerts in the Park at Hāwera's King Edward Park on Sunday 14 February.

Entertainment will begin with Hāwera musician, Mitch Careswell, kicking things off at 4.30pm. Mitch impressed with his 'Lockdown Local' concert which was part of South Taranaki District Councils COVID-19 Lockdown events.

Then at 5.30pm, the legendary Kiwi country band The Warratahs will take the stage. Over 30 years since their debut album, The Warratahs are Kiwi music royalty. They play a unique brand of country and folk music, with the fire of 50's style rock and roll.

South Taranaki District Council events co-ordinator Hayley Old says she looks forward to hearing a range of music reverberate around King Edward Park covered by both local and well known artists.

"We hope families and whānau take the opportunity to enjoy this free event relaxing in Hāwera's premier park," says Hayley. "We encourage those attending to make an evening of it by bringing along a picnic or buying something from the food vendors we will have available."

This event is proudly brought to you by Council and supported by the TSB Community Trust.
